As combat firing practices by light AAA units may have been conducted at both Jueterbog as well as Altengrabow, confirmatory information is requested.

[REDACTED] Comment. The Zenuthen railroad station is situated on the Koenigs-wusterhausen - Berlin railroad line. If the observation was correct, the troop train probably was redispached from Zenuthen to an undetermined receiving station.

[REDACTED] Comment. The two troop trains were previously reported [REDACTED]

They carried components of the 62nd AAA Div (US) to the Wustrow AAA Range. The troop train on 28 March 1953 was not unloaded at Schwerin, but at the Neubuckow railroad station.

[REDACTED] Comment. The train from Jueterbog probably carried repaired rocket launchers, while repaired tanks were loaded on the trains from Wuensdorf.
